Bin Laden's Influence From Afar

Al-Qaeda leader's diary shows his reach remained worldwide

Washington

Deep in hiding, his terror organization becoming battered and fragmented, Osama bin Laden kept pressing followers to find new ways to hit the U.S., officials say, citing his private journal and other documents recovered in last week's raid.

Strike smaller cities, bin Laden suggested. Target trains as well as planes. Above all, kill as many Americans as possible in a single attack.

Though he was out of the public eye and al-Qaeda seemed to be weakening, bin Laden never yielded control of his worldwide organization, U.S. officials on condition of anonymity said Wednesday. His personal, handwritten journal and his massive collection of computer files reveal his hand at work in every recent major al-Qaeda threat, including plots in Europe last year that had travelers and embassies on high alert, two officials said.

Documents reveal Osama bin Laden never yielded control of al-Qaeda while in hiding.

President Obama's approval rating the highest point in two years, according to an Associated Press-GfK poll taken after U.S. forces killed Osama bin Laden. (AP)

The information shatters the government's conventional thinking about bin Laden, who had been regarded for years as mostly an inspirational figurehead whose years in hiding made him too marginalized to maintain operational control of the organization he founded.

Instead, bin Laden was communicating from his walled compound in Pakistan with al-Qaeda's offshoots, including the Yemen branch that has emerged as the leading threat to the U.S., the documents indicate. Don't limit attacks to New York City, he said in his writings. Consider other areas such as Los Angeles or smaller cities.

In one particularly macabre bit of mathematics, bin Laden's writings show him musing over just how many Americans he must kill to force the U.S. to withdraw from the Arab world. He tells his disciples that only a body count of thousands, something on the scale of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, would shift U.S. policy. He also schemed about ways to sow political dissent in Washington and play political figures against one another, officials said. KIMBERLY DOZIER (AP)

Miss. Delta Floodwaters Swell

Rena Lara, Miss.

Floodwaters from the bloated Mississippi River and its tributaries spilled across farm fields, cut off churches, washed over roads and forced people from their homes Wednesday in the Mississippi Delta, a poverty-stricken region only a generation or two removed from sharecropping days.

People used boats to navigate flooded streets as the crest rolled slowly downstream, bringing misery to poor, low-lying communities. Hundreds have left their homes in the Delta in the past several days as the water rose toward some of the highest levels on record.

The flood crest is expected to push all the way through the Delta by late next week.

Officials in the Delta town of Rena Lara, which has no local newspaper or TV stations, tried to reassure residents that they are doing what they can to shore up the levee and that they will warn people if they need to leave.

Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour urged people to get out if they think there is even a chance their homes will flood. He said there is no reason to believe a levee on the Yazoo River would fail, but if it did. 107 feet of water would flow over small towns.

Swollen by weeks of heavy rain and snowmelt, the Mississippi is projected to crest at Vicksburg on May 19. From there, it is expected to reach New Orleans on May 23.

Even after the crest passes, water levels will remain high for weeks. (AP)

Vt. Health Care For All Nears

Montpelier, Vt.

Accustomed to being the first to dip its toe into hot-button issues, Vermont is preparing to provide public health care to all residents regardless of income, moving toward a government-run system.

Gov. Peter Shumlin is expected to sign legislation this month marking the first step on the path to phasing out most private insurance. The effort puts Vermont well in front of last year's federal health care overhaul.

The ultimate goal, Shumlin said recently, is a Canadian-style system "where health care is a right and not a privilege." (AP)

Scientists Find Lung Stem Cells

New York

Scientists believe they've discovered stem cells in the lung that can make a wide variety of the organ's tissues, a finding that might open new doors for treating emphysema and other diseases.

When these human cells were injected into mice, they showed their versatility by rebuilding airways, air sacs and blood vessels within two weeks. One expert called that "amazing."

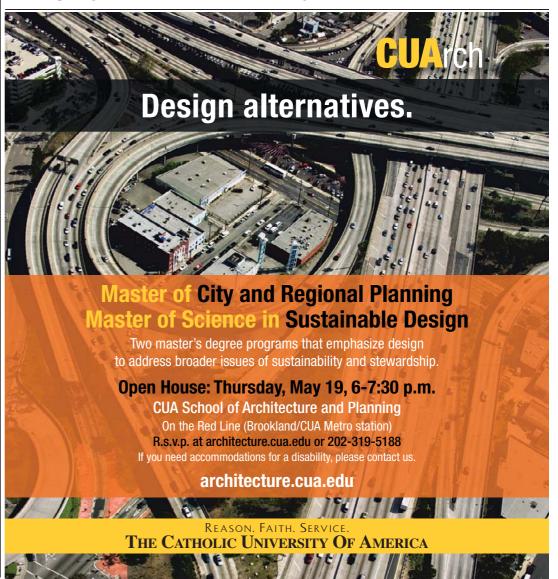

While stem cells have been found in bone marrow and some other parts of the body, it hasn't been clear whether such a versatile cell existed in the lung. (AP)

Rebels Proclaim Major Gains in Misrata

Libyan government denies losing ground as opposition surges

Tripoli, Libya

Pressing to break a two-month siege, rebels in the port city of Misrata said Wednesday they had captured the local airport and pushed Moammar Gadhafi's troops farther from the western outskirts of the opposition-held city in Libya.

The reported advances were the latest in a recent flurry of accounts of rebel victories, coinciding with intensified NATO airstrikes on the Libyan leader's forces.

In capturing the airport, rebels said they seized weapons and ammunition in what one fighter called "a major victory."

The fighter, who gave his name as Abdel Salam, said five rebels were killed and 105 injured in the fighting Wednesday.

Control of Misrata's airport is strategically important for the city's embattled rebel fighters, since it presumably could be used to fly in humanitarian aid.

Mohamed, a member of Misrata's local council who asked that his full name not be used, said rebels also captured about 40 miles of territory west of the city, and about 23 miles toward the east. And he said Misrata's port, a crucial supply point that had been under siege from Gadhafi's troops, was safe.

Though some of the recent reports of ground combat are difficult to confirm, they seem to represent a major boost for the rebels' military prospects after weeks of stalemate on several fronts.

In Tripoli, a government spokesman denied the rebels' claims of success in Misrata.

Meanwhile...

In Geneva, U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Wednesday called for "an immediate, verifiable ceasefire" in Libya, and said Moammar Gadhafi's government had agreed to another visit by a special envoy. Ban said he spoke with Libya's prime minister, Baghdadi al-Mahmoudi, by phone late Tuesday to urge a ceasefire and demand unimpeded access for U.N. humanitarian workers in Libya. (AP)

"This is nonsense," said Moussa Ibrahim. "We control the airport and we also control the sea port."

Also Wednesday, Gadhafi brielfy appeared on Libyan state television after weeks of absence that led to rumors he had been injured. He did not speak during the appearance. (AP/THE WASHINGTON POST)

Syrian Army Shells Communities

Beirut

The Syrian army shelled residential areas and unleashed gunmen Wednesday, and a rights group said at least 18 people were killed, including an 8-year-old boy.

Syrian activists and protesters renewed their cries for the world to join them in calling for President Bashar Assad to give up power. More than 750 people have been killed and thousands detained since the uprising began in March.

European countries summoned Syrian ambassadors Wednesday to threaten new sanctions if the regime fails to halt the bloodshed

Deadly Precedent

Shelling residential areas was a tactic used by Syrian President Bashar Assad's father and predecessor, Hafez, to crush dissent. In 1982, the elder Assad crushed a Sunni uprising by shelling the town of Hama, killing 10,000 to 25,000 people, according to Amnesty International estimates. Iraq May Prolong U.S. Presence

PM: Troop extension might be pursued if leadership backs one

Baghdad

Iraq's prime minister said Wednesday he might ask thousands of U.S. troops to remain in the country next year provided that a solid majority of the main political parties back the request.

Nouri al-Maliki's comments indicated a shift from his stance that there would be no U.S. troops past this year. But his insistence on having a consensus before making the decision indicates al-Maliki's worry that he'll be blamed for such a politically risky decision.

The prime minister said he will meet with Iraqi leaders by the end of May to gauge support for having U.S. troops stay beyond the Dec. 31 withdrawal deadline.

"I will bring the leaders of the political blocs together. If they say yes, I will agree and if they say no, I will reject it," al-Maliki said.

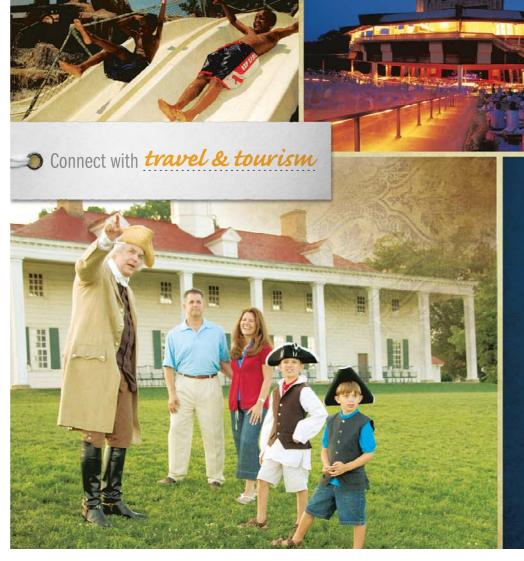

Backstory

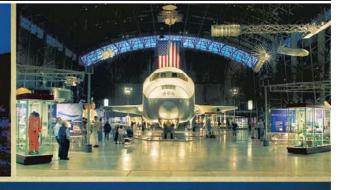

The Dec. 31 deadline to withdraw U.S. troops from Iraq was set under a 2008 security agreement between Washington and Baghdad. A new deal would have to be reached for troops to remain in 2012, officials said. The White House and Pentagon have signaled they are open to that. But it took months to hammer out the original pact, and time is running out to negotiate a new one. (AP)

He said at least 70 percent of leaders representing the major Sunni, Shiite and Kurdish political parties must support the move before he will ask the White House for the troops to remain.

Sunni and Kurdish leaders generally want U.S. troops to remain to help the nation become more stable and to continue training security forces. But hard-line Shiites who helped al-Maliki secure a second term last year have threatened to revolt if U.S. soldiers remain. Iraqi demonstrators have recently demanded American forces leave on time.

The Obama administration has said it wants to know within weeks whether Baghdad will seek to continue more than eight years of a heavy U.S. military presence in Iraq. SINAN SALAHEDDIN (AP)

Study: D.C. Ranks 17th in Transit

Region stacks up well against nation's top 100 metropolitan areas

Public Transportation

Washington's Metro transit system may seem bad to the average commuter who rides it daily and gets stuck waiting for trains or walking up broken escalators, but it may not be so bad when compared with other major metropolitan areas' transit systems.

It ranked 17th among 100 major cities' bus and rail systems in a report from the Brookings Institution. The 64-page report judged the areas based mainly on how accessible transit systems are to the areas where jobs are being created and on the size of the geographic area the systems cover.

The top-ranked cities were Honolulu and San Jose, respectively. New York's transit system ranked 13th.

Fun Facts From the Brookings Study

- Of working-age D.C.-area residents, 82 percent live within three quarters of a mile of a transit stop.
- The median wait for any rush-hour transit vehicle is 6.6 minutes. That makes the D.C. area one of five transit systems where there are trains and buses almost every seven minutes. The four others are New York, Los Angeles and Milwaukee.
- The D.C. area has roughly 1.2 million jobs that are accessible in a 90-minute commute, ranking it 24th in the country.

The Brookings study looked at the bus and train systems in major cities and compared them based on how frequently their trains and buses ran, how accessible public transportation was to residents and how close it was to where companies are creating jobs.

In the D.C. area, it looked at 16 different agencies that provide train, bus or other public transit services, including MARC, Metro, VRE, the Fairfax Connector, and Ride On bus services in Montgomery County. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

GOP: No Agenda for D.C. Budget

Day before hearing, House panel insists no ulterior motives

Washington

On the eve of a House committee hearing on the District's budget, two top Republicans on the panel said Wednesday that they had no ulterior motives and were not angling to restore congressional control of the city's finances.

Thursday morning's hearing before the House Oversight and Government Reform subcommittee on health care, District of Columbia, census and the National Archives will "examine the fiscal sustainability of D.C. spending," according to a news release issued by the committee.

D.C. Mayor Vincent C. Gray is scheduled to testify, as are D.C. Council Chairman Kwame R. Brown, both Democrats, and Chief Financial Officer Natwar Gandhi.

The release caught the eye of local officials and activists because it referenced the now-defunct Financial Control Board and noted that "[There] are seven separate 'triggers' which would automatically revive" the congressionally established body.

Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., chairman of the full Oversight committee, said in a brief interview that the hearing should not be taken as a sign that he or his colleagues believed the District's finances were in crisis.

"We don't yet see anything other than the ordinary concern for a city that does have some fiscal challenges that they have to meet," Issa said. "We have concern but we don't have any expectation of the control board needing to come back."

Rep. Trey Gowdy, R-S.C., who chairs the D.C. subcommittee, said the hearing had no "agenda, nefarious or otherwise."

"There's no 'lay in wait for a gotcha' moment," Gowdy said. "It truly is: Tell us about the fiscal state of the District."

The D.C. Council is wading through Gray's proposed $10.8 billion budget for fiscal 2012, making the District's finances a natural subject for a hearing, and Issa said he saw the District as similar to other cities and small states going through "a difficult budget time." (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Wall Street Warning Shot

The government scores a major victory in its crackdown on insider trading

Washington

Hedge fund billionaire Raj Rajaratnam was convicted on all 14 counts of fraud and conspiracy Wednesday in the biggest insider trading case in a generation.

The verdict was a historic victory for the Justice Department, which used tactics once reserved for investigations of mobsters, drug dealers and the like to expose financial professionals and corporate insiders trafficking in such business confidences as details about pending mergers.

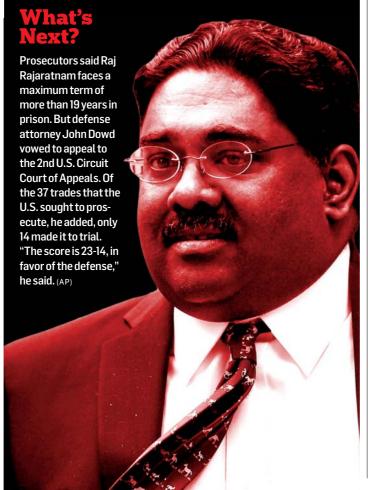

The prosecution secretly made recordings of Rajaratnam talking to his alleged tipsters, taking the jury to a dark side of Wall Street that was long the realm of suspicion rather than proof. The government also drew upon testimony of co-conspirators whom the government had turned against Rajaratnam.

Rajaratnam, 53, head of Galleon Management, was accused of using fraud to reap profits or avoid losses of more than $60 million. The case ushered in a new era in white-collar criminal prosecutions, said Anthony Michael Sabino, a professor at St. John's University.

"For more than 30 years, the government has had a spotty history in insider trading cases, reflecting the difficulty of gathering evidence, explaining the machinations of high finance to a jury, and reconciling sometimes conflicting legal theories." Sabino said.

"Not so here, because Raj hung himself with his own words, as caught on tape," he said.

One of Rajaratnam's alleged tipsters had been a member of the board of Wall Street powerhouse Goldman Sachs and a former head of the international management consulting giant McKinsey & Co. He allegedly tipped Rajaratnam off

"Rajaratnam was among the best and the brightest. ... Yet, like so many others recently, he let greed and corruption cause his undoing."

— MANHATTAN U.S. ATTORNEY PREET BHARARA SAID IN A STATEMENT, DISCUSS ING WEDNESDAY'S CONVICTION OF FORMER WALL STREET TITAN RAJ RAJARATNAM.

to the fact that Berkshire Hathaway chairman Warren Buffett was going to make a crucial investment in Goldman Sachs at the height of the financial crisis.

The parade of witnesses at the trial in federal court in New York included the Chairman of Goldman Sachs, Lloyd Blankfein. Rajaratnam did not testify in his own defense, but his lawyer argued that he traded on legitimate investment analysis and information in the public domain.

Insider trading should be offensive to everyone who relies on the stock market because it "cheats the ordinary investor, victimizes the companies whose information is stolen, and is an affront not only to the fairness of the market, but the rule of law," Manhattan U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara said.

Amid a broader crackdown on such crimes, Rajaratnam was the 35th person — and the most prominent — convicted of insider trading in the Southern District of New York in the past year and a half.

The stakes were high for both sides. Given the extraordinary evidence the government had amassed against Rajaratnam, had the verdict gone the other way, "it would have made insider trading cases against Wall Street traders almost impossible," said J. Robert Brown, professor of law at the University of Denver's Sturm College of Law.

Brown predicted the verdict will force insider traders to exchange information "in a more devious manner," but he doubted it would hamper insider trading. "The money in this area is too big," he said. DAVID S. HILZENRATH (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Other Notable Cases

On June 4, 2009, the Securities and Exchange Commission charged former Countrywide Financial Chief Executive Angelo Mozilo for raking in $140 million from the sale of his company stock. While selling stocks to make a profit isn't unusual, the SEC said that Mozilo's sale was based on non-public information. The SEC also charged Mozilo with fraud. In October 2010, Mozilo and the SEC settled the charges.

In November 2008, the SEC slapped Dallas Mavericks owner Mark Cuban with a charge for insider trading. The SEC said Cuban sold shares of Internet company Mamma.com based on private information about "an impending stock offering." The complaint said he tried to avoid about $750,000 in losses. A U.S. district judge threw out the case in July 2009, but an appeals court revived it in September 2010.

Martha Stewart, flanked by U.S. marshals, leaves after sentencing at Manhattan federal court in New York on July 16, 2004. Stewart was sentenced to five months in prison and five months of home confinement for lying about a stock sale.

Financier Ivan Boesky was convicted of illegal insider trading in 1987. He served almost two years in prison and paid more than $100 million in fines.

In 1990, junk bond tycoon Michael Milken was sentenced to 10 years in prison for securities fraud and other business crimes, including rigging corporate takeovers and manipulating financial markets.

Tradition Lured Turgeon

New hoops coach says Terps' glorious past was a big draw

Terps Men's Hoops

Before he accepted the offer to become Maryland basketball coach, Mark Turgeon needed to get the lowdown on the job from Gary Williams.

Williams held the post for 22 years before retiring, and Turgeon was poised to become his successor. Working at a school with a great basketball tradition was very appealing to Turgeon, who had spurned several other opportunities to move during his four years at Texas A&M.

After speaking at length with Williams on Sunday night, Turgeon knew it was time to leave College Station for College Park — even if it meant replacing an iconic coach.

Inside the Job Hunt

Mark Turgeon learned last Thursday that he might be a candidate for the Maryland job, but that didn't stop him from leaving on a camping trip Friday. Turgeon couldn't get cell reception until Sunday, and that's when Anderson called to set up a meeting in a Pittsburgh hotel. With Anderson in jeans and a scruffy Turgeon wearing a Kansas City Chiefs shirt over his Texas A&M shirt, the two talked about the future of the basketball program. "When he left the meeting, I knew it was my job to take or leave," Turgeon said. (AP)

"If I was apprehensive, I wouldn't be standing here," Turgeon said at his introduction Wednesday. "I had a great conversation with Gary, and he made me feel comfortable. I know Gary's not going to try to sabotage Maryland basketball." The comment drew a roar of laughter in a room filled with Maryland alumni, former players and booster club members who remember former Maryland athletic director Debbie Yow saying last month that Williams "tried to sabotage" her search for a new basketball coach at North Carolina State.

Turgeon, 46, compiled a 97-40 record at Texas A&M and took the team to the NCAA tournament in each of his four seasons at the school. But an offer to became part of a group that includes such names as Lefty Driesell, Len Elmore, Tom McMillen, John Lucas, Walt Williams, and, of course, Gary Williams, was too good to be true.

"The reason I'm here is because of its great tradition and all the things this basketball program accomplished over the years," Turgeon said. "It was going to take a great job for me to move. ... Maryland is a special place." (AP)

FIFA Seeks Proof of Corruption

Soccer

Facing a deepening corruption scandal, FIFA demanded evidence Wednesday to back up English claims that six executive committee members were involved in bribery during bidding for the 2018 and 2022 World Cups.

Following Tuesday's allegations made during a British parliamentary inquiry, FIFA secretary general Jerome Valcke wrote to England's Football Association asking for a complete report plus "all documentary evidence" from David Triesman, the former leader of England's 2018 bid.

FIFA President Sepp Blatter, meanwhile, promised to resolve the crisis before he comes up for re-election on June 1. (AP)

HE DOESN'T WEAR a T-shirt emblazoned with "The Truth Is Out There," but Marc Kaufman does believe that alien life (probably) is. The Washington Post science writer's new book, "First Contact" ($26, Simon and Schuster), is a layman-friendly look at astrobiology - the search for alien microbes, inhabitable planets and the origins of life here on Earth.

Why do scientific breakthroughs involving alien life tend to be misunderstood and overblown by the media?

The idea that there could be life beyond Earth is hardwired into human beings. It speaks to something in our imaginations and it's something that I think people want to be true. But astrobiology is trying to come at it from this really hard-nosed science perspective, and the subject is so sensational that when the two intersect, there's almost always a huge clash.

Since there's water on Mars, could we start a colony there?

There is a school of thought that says we should definitely do that. I believe Stephen Hawking is an advocate of going to Mars and changing things - they call it terraforming — to make it more hospitable.

What would that be like?

They haven't really taken it that far. There's a guy named Paul Davies who's an advocate of the "one-way to Mars space trip" — he says the really expensive and complicated part of going to Mars is coming back. He's proposed that the first missions there be one-way — you'd go there and set up little colonies. That isn't really terraforming, but you'd maybe go live in a crack in a cave and hopefully later some other people would come.

Wouldn't that just turn into "Lord of the Flies"?

Temptation and Treachery

'Farragut North' draws an accurate picture of political wonk drama

Stage

The wonks of Washington seem to believe that their every work-related activity is fascinating and dramatic, so it's unfortunate when plays about political machinations encourage them. But "Farragut North," playing at Olney Theatre through May 29, manages to tease out the drama of the twisted, insider-y world of campaign politics — without ever forgetting, "Politico"-style, that a man who gains the world and loses his soul profits little.

The players are Democrats, but this is no easy answer-filled festival of liberal politics like "The West Wing." Instead, "Farragut North" is a modern "Julius Caesar" - indeed, the play's upcoming film version, which stars Philip Seymour Hoffman, has been renamed "The Ides of March," after the date of Caesar's assassination. The characters, political strategists and staffers working on an emerging campaign during the Iowa caucuses do not shrink from savaging each other. The lead character is a press secretary for the campaign of a Howard Dean-like figure, going up against an establishment campaign and his own innate sense of morality.

"We've all grown accustomed to political leaders falling from great heights in spectacular fashion," says director Clay Hopper, but he cautions that the themes in "Farragut" are classical as well as topical.

"What it really speaks to is the way power is wielded in American politics, the way people try to frame narratives and spin things," he says. "Making decisions based more on self-interest than on the common good can lead to a very corrosive political environment, and that's what the play is pointing to."

For an audience likely to be chock-full of wonks, there's one last essential question: Is it accurate?

"We had a couple of people here who had actually worked on an Iowa campaign before, during the caucuses," Hopper says. "All of them, without exception, said, 'This is exactly what it's like. The only thing that's different is no one's smoking in your play."" FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

Ahead of a hometown reading from his book "Role Models." John Waters shares his thoughts on style, nightlife and female urinals.

OUSTA

Forget Clark Gable: Cinema's greatest moustache lives on the face of John Waters. Baltimore's Sultan of Sleaze fills it in every morning with a few strokes of Maybelline Expert Eyes eyebrow pencil in Velvet Black. "I always thought that if I ever retire. I'll shave it off and eat it in front of a live audience," Waters says of his iconic. villainous facial hair. "That would be my finale."

That moustache is part of the creepster moio behind an illustrious fourdecade career that put Charm City on the extreme-cinema map. From his humble beginnings shoplifting thrift-store costumes with drag legend Divine (Harris Glenn Milstead), Waters has climbed steadily toward full-fledged cultural infamy. It looks good on him, like his trademark Comme des Garcons haute-couture soiled suits, and has given him the cred necessary to become a gonzo journalist of sorts, a chronicler of extreme personalities.

His sixth book, "Role Models," out this month in paperback, is a collection of reported profiles of Waters' own influences, from Little Richard to imprisoned former Put On Your Cha-Cha

Heels

"My 'look' for the last 20 years or so has been 'disaster at the dry cleaners," writes Waters in "Role Models," where he also dishes some style advice for the younger set: "No one over 30 years old should ever be seen in a convertible.' He offered us a few more tips on looking horribly stylish: ★ Don't wear

- skinny jeans past 35. Well, 30, really.
- ★ Never wear leather pants unless you're a Nazi. Or Jim Morrison.
- ★ Never wear tube tops, ever.

Baltimore: The City That Bleeds

Baltimore bars "aren't 'faux' anything," writes Waters. "They're real and alarming." He details some of the city's best-loved (and now sadly defunct) seedy spots in his book, describing places no hipster would dare set a moccasin-clad foot. But a few choice spots remain, if you're feeling brave (or stupid) — the Bloody Bucket, for instance, on Union Avenue in Hampden. And if you're in the market for caulk with your Colt 45, has Waters got the place for you.

"I went to another one recently, on Eastern Avenue," Waters offers. "It's in a woman's house — half hardware store, half bar, so you can order a drink and buy nails. I don't know that it has a name. You could see her bed in the back."

Scentimental Journey

For the 1981 premiere of "Polyester," Waters distributed Odorama cards, redolent with the scents of pizza, glue, gasoline and other unsavory smells featured in the film. What would go on an Odorama card for Baltimore?

"It would have the smell of a large industrial jug of mayonnaise at a flea market in August," says Waters. "The smell of leftover poppers after a wild night at a dance club. The smell of 35mm film stuck in a drive-in projector."

Waters filmed scenes from his 2000 film "Cecil B. Demented" at Bengies Drive-In, a Baltimore landmark. Go for the cinema history, Waters says, but stay for the plumbing.

"In the ladies' room, they have female urinals from the '50s," he says. "I never knew there was such a thing. But I promise you — you can go look."

"Manson girl" (and good friend) Leslie Van Houten.

"Once you're writing a book, you have a reason to call up and just butt into someone's personal life. You get to be nosy, and no one seems to mind," Waters says of his interviewing approach — which was sometimes met with suspicion by subjects wary of the man who unleashed "Pink Flamingos" and its human-chicken sex scene onto the world in 1972. "And if they do, at least you have an excuse," he says. "Oh well, that's my job.' Rather than, 'I am a lunatic."

In addition to his writing endeavors, Waters is focusing on his ongoing oneman live show, "This Filthy World," as well as a few television and film projects — including "Fruitcake," a children's Christmas movie about meat thieves.

"We have them in Baltimore. They knock on your door and say, 'Meat man!' And you go downstairs and say, 'I'll take a pork butt and a ham and a pound of ground beef.' And they shoplift it and bring it back to you and you pay halfprice. It's quite common here."

Waters kicks off a multicity U.S. tour for "Role Models" Saturday with a reading at Atomic Books. Ahead of that appearance, he shared some hometown memories, nightlife tips and sage advice for young weirdoes trying to make it in the world. Shauna Miller (Express)

Will Old Tech Win the Future?

Alexis Madrigal looks at the history of green technology with an eve toward innovation

Books

Atlantic Monthly editor Alexis Madrigal is passionate about green technology. So passionate that he's got a wave motor tattooed on his right arm. Madrigal's book, "Powering the Dream" ($28, Da Capo > Press), traces the centuries-long history of green

technology in the U.S., including Californians' brief flirtation with the buoy-Madrigal like generator as a means of producing power. Madrigal, who reads Thursday at Politics & Prose, examines generations of eco-friendly innovations, proving that windmills are more retro than cutting-edge.

Some readers seem surprised that green technology is not a new concept. Why do you think that is?

People underestimate the smartness of people in the past. It's not as if people didn't know that if you put a bunch of cars burning gasoline onto the road that there would be pollution. They wanted maximum mobility, flexibility and autonomy.

"When we've been in crisis mode, we've done well coming up with new innovations, new ideas."

What's your favorite earth-friendly invention from the past?

I'm really into the wave motors of the 1890s and the first decade of the 20th century. There were dozens of inventors in California who were paying a lot for coal imported from the East. They'd look at the Pacific Ocean and say, "Look at that power there. If only we could come up with the right machines to translate it for human needs." So, they built all these machines attempting to do that and even though many of them failed, I still think that the impulse was about as pure an impulse as it gets.

Compared to other nations, the U.S. has historically been very ungreen. Why is that?

We had access to a lot of oil as we were bringing our country together. We had an attitude born of the 19th century that our continent was one of instant plenty.

Are you optimistic about our environmental and technology

I think I am. When we've been in crisis mode, we've done well coming up with new innovations, new ideas. Katie Aberbach (express)

Beyond the Kingdom of Abba

Sweden's Lykke Li doesn't want to be your 'Dancing Queen'

Music

Swedish pop stars are measured on a finely calibrated scale, one that ranges from clean-cut Abba to Robyn's edgy brush cut. But the meter can't read Lykke Li. Maybe it's the five years of her childhood she spent on a Portuguese mountain.

Sure, the Swedish singer's sound is a little bit "Dancing Queen," but it's also a little bit "Material Girl," with a rock-star edge that's endeared her quickly to American audiences since her well-received 2008 debut, "Youth Novels."

But Li's not eager to pick up the American pop mantle, either. "I was misquoted once that Madonna was a huge influence for me, but it's not true," she says. "It's true that when I was 7, I had a record of [Madonna's greatest hits disc] 'The Immaculate Collection,' but I'm much more influenced by artists like Leonard Cohen and Nina Simone." She'd "rather just take a walk" than listen to Lady Gaga.

Singer Lykke Li has an independent streak that sets her apart from the pop pack even as it drives her mainstream success.

But mainstream popularity has some upsides: Li has found her music featured in a growing number of TV shows and movies stateside. She even wrote "Possibility," a song featured on her new record, "Wounded Rhymes," especially for a scene in "Twilight: New Moon" after screening an early cut of the film. She says she related to the longing

"I write what I feel, and I love pretending to be someone else. I just make my own way through my songs."

of Bella's character — but also recognized a more worldly reality in the opportunity.

"People aren't listening to radio anymore," Li says. "If you want people to listen to your music, you have to put it in on T.V. and in movies."

Her plan is working. In one week last month, songs from "Wounded Rhymes" were featured on both "Gossip Girl" and "Mob Wives." And "I Follow Rivers," the album's first single, was part of a recent "Glee" episode devoted to underrated artists.

So, should we expect Lykke Li to be soundtracking the next season of "Grey's Anatomy"? Or is she planning something more outside the lines for her next record?

"I write what I feel, and I love pretending to be someone else," she says. "I just make my own way through my songs." ADAM GRIFFITHS (EXPRESS)

Ted Leo's cost-benefit test of the rock 'n' roll lifestyle still finds him in the black

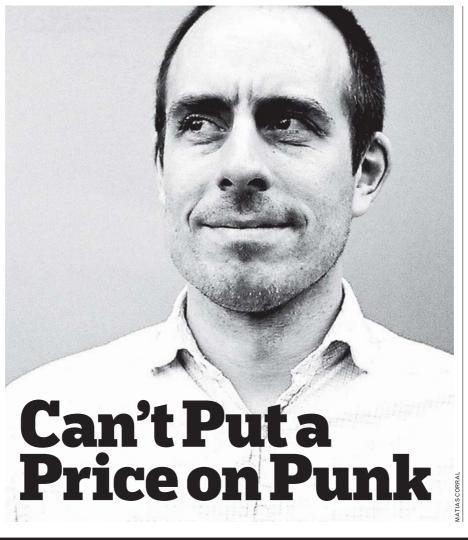

Music

After two decades of being the closest thing the U.S. has ever had to a homegrown Joe Strummer, Ted Leo is tired. The left-leaning singer-songwriter is easily one of the hardest-working musicians in indie rock — and that's turned out not to be an easy gig.

At one point last summer, Leo even told one music blog it was all over for the Pharmacists, the band he cut five albums of power-pop jangle, spikey dub and fist-pumping pub rock with over the past decade. "It's a losing proposition for us at this point," he confessed, and the rumors started to spread.

The business end of making music has created some very real barriers for Leo, 40. "It's a massive concern," he explains. "I have a ton of credit card debt, and I owe the IRS a lot of money. I can't really get on top of that. I have to put every cent I do earn into daily survival. That's just the way it goes."

Leo has a way of finding the lightness in heavy topics, and his latest album, 2010's "Brutalist Bricks," shone with an exuberance that D.C. audiences remember well from his days fronting beloved D.C. modsters Chisel back in the '90s.

"I wouldn't be doing what I'm doing if I wasn't having an amazing time. The business concerns are still secondary."

Saturday's show at the Black Cat ends a 10-city solo tour, making it a sort of homecoming. Even after 20 years, Leo says he still gets a charge out of discovering new places to play. In L.A., he strummed poolside at a posh hotel. In Scranton, Pa., a fan turned him on to an old Croatian church he had to see at his next stop, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The church provided a little divine inspiration. "This artist did all these incredible murals in the '30s — crazy, political murals that had to do with labor and exploitation." Could the murals be a basis for new song? "Certainly," he says. "It was amazing."

It seems there are enough good things about the musical life that Leo can't quit it after all. "I wouldn't be doing what I'm doing if I wasn't having an amazing time," he says. "The business concerns are still secondary." JASON CHERKIS

Lita Ford gives up the island life and gets back to shredding

Music

Do the following words and phrases mean anything to you?: Whitesnake, Great White, Danger Danger, Faster Pussycat. If so, you probably lived through the glory days of hair rock, which the M3 Rock Festival brings back to Merriweather Post Pavilion this weekend.

No one knows more about that glory — and the grip of its nostalgia on fans — than former Runaways guitarist Lita Ford. "It's part of the soundtrack to their lives," she explains. "Maybe it's the song where

History Lesson

Queen of Noise

Lita Ford broke out as a force of electric-guitar nature in 1975, when she joined the legendary all-female rock band the Runaways with Joan Jett at age 16. The band broke up in 1979, and Ford began a successful solo career. One of her biggest hits was the 1988 anti-suicide song "Close My Eyes Forever," a duet with former Black Sabbath singer Ozzy Osbourne. (EXPRESS) they lost their virginity."

Ford herself has never been shy about sex, whether in her music (the 1988 make-out anthem "Kiss Me Deadly," for example) or during interviews for her 2009 comeback LP, the randy "Wicked Wonderland," where she and her then-husband, Jim Gillette, spoke of their robust marital life. But with her marriage now over — a topic she declines to discuss — Ford is ready to make a return to recording on her own terms.

"Wicked Wonderland' was really a collaboration between me and my ex-husband," she says. "I want this next record to be a full-blown Lita album. I want it to be something that the new generation, as well as old Lita fans, can grow up with. I'm taking my time on it."

Lita Ford is responsible for some of the sweetest guitar licks in heavy metal.

After spending a decade living with her family on the isolated Caribbean island of Turks and Caicos, the 52-year-old mother of two is also happy to be making another comeback: to civilization.

"The islands are a good getaway for summer or a couple of weeks, but it does get boring," says Ford, who's now based in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "Especially for women, because women like to be pampered: the hair salon, their cell phones, they want to drive their own cars, get their nails done, go shopping. You can't do any of that on the island. There's nothing — just [expletive] coconuts." CHRISTOPHER PORTER

Chris Hemsworth as Thor (the blonde one) with Tom Hiddleston as Loki.

Thor
If you have a fondness for loud, silly, eye-popping action-adventure films, then "Thor" delivers. The humor is humorous and just self-referential enough to let you know the film doesn't take itself too seriously.

2 Fast Five

This "Fast" film likely won't win over new converts to the 10-year-old franchise. But the reason this series has survived for a decade is because it respects its target audience, caters to their adrenalized needs and rarely tries to be something it isn't.

3 Jumping the Broom

Although the title "Jumping the Broom" refers to a wedding ritual, it might unintentionally conjure up images of the wicked witch after spending a couple of hours with the momzillas of the bride and groom at the heart of Salim Akil's dramedy.

4 Something Borrowed

This should go without saying, but itt is not okay to sleep with the fiance of one's best friend. What's odd, and ultimately icky, is how enthusiastically this film attempts to justify doing so.

5 Rio

With its bright palette and incandescent splashes of light, "Rio" recalls last year's "Tangled" as a chance simply to luxuriate in rich visual pleasures. "Rio" sends viewers aloft on an exuberant flight of fancy.

In 'Lebanon, PA.,' a parent's death gives new meaning to a grown-up child's life

Screen

No matter how adult we feel, there's a part of us that stays a little kid until a parent dies. That sort of loss can be the start of a new journey, as the drama "Lebanon, PA.," shows. In the film, main character Will (Josh Hopkins) travels to the titular city after losing his father. While cleaning out his dad's house, he becomes enmeshed with married woman Vicki (Samantha Mathis) and C.J., a pregnant teen next door (Rachel Kitson). Express talked to writer/director Ben Hickernell, right, about the emotional scope and small-town setting of the film.

Why did you decide to start the film with a parent's death?

That moment is a seminal moment. It makes you take stock of where you are. You're no longer in relation to your parent. You have to really make your own place in the world, what used to define you is totally gone. In our 20s and 30s, we're all about gain. Having that kind of loss at this period of life when you're all about gain and growth is really shocking. It was the only thing that could make Will start this process.

But CJ, who's unexpectedly pregnant, also has to start that process of redefining herself.

I do think CJ kind of steals the story in a way — it is Will's story, he's the hero, but as the movie really starts to gain steam, it becomes CJ's story as much as his, and by the end a lot of the dramatic thrust is from her. This is a movie about people from different backgrounds being forced together and forced to come to an understanding with one another.

An early shot in the film shows you can get five hours of parking for a quarter in Lebanon. Is that true?

Actually, in the script I wanted to show you get 15 minutes in Philly and one hour in Lebanon, but it turned out you get five hours. In the meantime, Philly downgraded that so you only get 7 minutes for a quarter. That, right there, shows so much disparity — not just in economics, but also the pace of life. Vanessa lives in Germany and studies at a "stunt school."

Catch her next weekend in "Wow! Vanessa, the Big Jump."

I'm Telling You, These Kids Today

Shockingly, your kids might respond to a movie that's not animated. Or about princesses, or cars or toys that come alive. If you're trying to mold your child into the best kind of film snob, the Kids World Cinema series is the place to go. It runs over the next two weekends in locations around D.C., and features films from all over the globe suitable for children ages 6 to 13. It took 10 international organizations combining cinematic forces to prove that kids everywhere think that people falling down is funny. Films range from three minutes long to an hour-and-a-half, and each screening features films from two or more countries along with a cultural workshop. This weekend opens with "Hugo and the Dragon," which features freaky-looking puppets. Next weekend is all about Brazil, Australia, Spain and Germany, the latter of which is represented by the documentary "Wow! Vanessa, the Big Jump," about a girl studying at a "stunt school," which apparently they have in Germany. We're pretty sure this film will give your kids some interesting ideas involving the roof of your house and gravity. And be sure to take a moment to check out the website, as younger kids might be bored at films with subtitles and older kids might think puppets are lame. Free screenings run at various locations from May 13-22; see Francedc.org for showtimes and more information.

summer preview '11: You'll never be bored, thanks to our guide to everything cool in local fitness, movies, sports, theater, festivals and anything else that's fun in the sun.

Hi, We're Here to Make You Feel So Very Old

Los Angeles rap collective ODD FUTURE WOLF GANG KILL THEM ALL took South by Southwest by storm. Now the group of misfit-art school-skate kids (ages 17 to 23) is poised for another breakthrough, as group leader Tyler, the Creator (who's only 20) releases his album, "Goblin," in May. Hit Craigslist for tickets to the shows at the Rock and Roll Hotel in D.C. and Sonar in Baltimore on May 18 and 19, since this may be your last chance to catch the 10-member group in cramped quarters. Nothing goes better with the second leg of the TRIPLE CROWN than Bruno Mars, Train and Puddle of Mud. OK, actually we're not sure why any of them will be playing at Baltimore's Pimlico racetrack for the Preakness, but there's nothing we can do to stop it, so we might as well quit wondering and just enjoy the music. Showing You Where to Stick It

Baltimore has long been home to the NCAA DIVISION 1 MEN'S LACROSSE CHAMPIONSHIP, and this year the tournament returns to M&T Bank Stadium, home of the Ravens. In 2010, Duke took the national title, but they'll face stiff competition to repeat with local teams Maryland, Johns Hopkins and Virginia all vying for a spot in the May 30 final. R.G. CAN'T-MISS MOVIES

Comic book movies may dominate this summer, but we're most excited about "X-Men: First Class," opening June 3, which follows the origins of the prestigious mutant academy. James McAvoy is the future Professor X, with Michael Fassbender as the man who becomes Magneto. The last X-Men movies have been weak, but this prequel looks to be one of the strongest films of blockbuster season. к.р.к.

Maybe it's because we launch into summer with the internationally appreciated May Day and Cinco de Mayo holidays, but the next few weeks are packed with so many intercultural celebrations around the area that we couldn't pick just one. K.A.

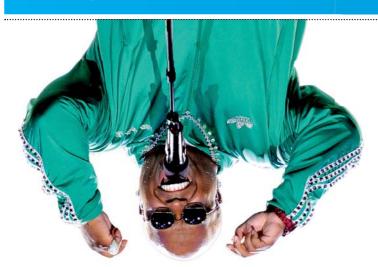

THE ASIA HERITAGE FOUNDATION throws its lively (and tasty) annual National Asian Heritage Festival on May 21. In addition to diverse street food stalls and tons of cultural exhibitions, this year's festival includes a "Sun Salutation" flash mob event and a parade at 1:30 p.m. Pennsylvania Avenue, between 3rd and 6th streets NW; 10 a.m.-7 p.m.; 202-468-5668, Culturaltourismdc.org.

For the sesquicentennial of Italy's unification, the citywide festival LA DOLCE DC presents many bellissimi events from now to July 31, including Washington National Opera's "Don Pasquale" (May 13-27) and the National Gallery's "Venice: Canaletto and His Rivals" (through May 30) Various locations; Ladolcedc.com

The Alliance Française hosts the annual FETE DE LA MUSIQUE, an al fresco showcase of up-andcoming musicians. The event resembles France's Music Day, which features live street music and dancing. Alliance Française, 2142 Wyoming Ave. NW; free, June 17, 5:30-11:30 p.m.; 202-234-7911; Francedc.org

Don't You Forget About Me

With the success CEE-LO GREEN has had of late — his zeitgeist-topping hit (politely edited to "Forget You"), a flamboyant Grammy performance and a gig judging NBC's "The Voice" — it's somewhat surprising he's opening for Rihanna at 1st Mariner Arena. Then again. Rihanna's been on quite the roll herself, with her big single "What's My Name?" and guest spots with Eminem and Kanye West. Together, this dream team is well worth the trip to Baltimore on June 4, R.G. 1st Mariner Arena, 201 W. Come As You Are

This year's CAPITAL PRIDE FESTIVAL celebrates Washington's lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community, but all are welcome at this rainbow-drenched, stiletto-filled 36th annual summer tradition. The 10-day festival — whose theme this year is Paving the Way includes the Mr. and Ms. Capital Pride pageant at 8 p.m. on Saturday, June 4, at Town Dance Boutique (2009 Eighth St. NW; 202-234-8696; Towndc.com). Keep an eye out for the winners at the Festival Parade on Saturday, June 11, which steps off in Dupont Circle at 6 p.m.; and the Street Festival on Pennsylvania Ave. NW the next day (11 a.m. to 6 p.m.), which will feature food, musical performances and educational activities. Going Right To the Source

The SOURCE FESTIVAL has a tough job, going up against the Capital Fringe Festival, but it's done admirably — the new works it presents are slightly more staid than Fringe (you probably won't get dragged up onstage or splattered with fake blood), but it's still three weeks of 10-minute plays, one-acts and full-length shows, all brand-new, F.z. - Source Theatre, 1835 14th St. NW; June 10-July 3; Sourcedc. org. You wouldn't call it a comeback, but it's good to know ARETHA FRANKLIN is back on tour after she had surgery for a mystery ailment early this year. The Queen of Soul even has a new album, her 38th, "Aretha: A Woman Falling Out of Love," out in May. Barbie in Blue Wig

Currently on her "California Dreams" tour - nodding to her twin 2010 hits "Teenage Dream" and "California Gurls" — KATY PERRY has solidified herself as an American pop princess, with sugary-sweet songs cloaked in innuendo. At Merriweather on June 15, she'll be joined by Sweden's undisputed pop queen: Robyn. Formerly a teen act (1997's "Show Me Love" hit big in the U.S.), Robyn re-emerged into the American consciousness last vear with her forwardthinking "Body Talk" albums, buoyed by critical cheerleading and the stellar "Dancing On My Own." It's Showtime!

The CAPITAL FRINGE FESTIVAL, a collection of offbeat shows that springs up in the District every summer, is impossible to predict, but we'll do our best: Some of the shows will be fantastically funny; some of them will be terrible. You will regret at least one of the musicals. An air conditioner will break. You will be pleasantly surprised by approximately two of the productions, and monologues are usually a safe bet. That's all the help we can give you. F.Z. Various locations; July 7-24; Capitalfringe.org.

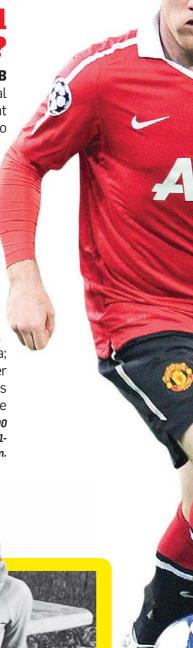

Never quite gotten over missing the opportunity to appear on "Double Dare?" Your obstacle course fantasies will be fulfilled with METRO DASH, which puts 30 challenges in your path to the finish line. You'll need strength to haul sandbags, power to hop over high boxes, balance to traverse a beam and, of course, speed to win the darn thing. Prizes are awarded to individuals and teams. V.H. What Football Lockout?

The EUROPEAN SOCCER CLUB SHOWCASE has become an annual tradition in the area during recent years, and this summer will be no different when Manchester United takes on FC Barcelona in a friendly at FedEx Field on July 30. While it's unclear who will actually play in the game — international team commitments might conflict both teams feature star-studded rosters, familiar to anyone who spent last summer skipping work for the World Cup. Argentina's Lionel Messi, Spanish midfielder Xavi and World Cup-winning goal scorer Andres Injesta lead Barcelona: while Man. U. touts English striker Wayne Rooney, right, Bulgaria's Dimitar Berbatov and Portuguese winger Nani. R.G. Fed Ex Field, 1600 FedEx Way, Landover; 7 p.m., $40 to $175; 301-276-6000, Fieldlandover.com.

summer preview '11

There is nothing filmmaker Errol Morris touches that doesn't turn to awe some. His documentaries have ranged from a look at a family-run pet cemetery in "Gates of Heaven" to profiling Robert McNamara in "The Fog of War." His newest — and possibly his best—is "Tabloid," opening July 15. In it, Morris looks at a sex scandal involving a Southern beauty gueen, a Mormon missionary, and the British tabloid press. And then there's some dog cloning thrown in for good measure. If you don't know Morris' work, this is a good place to start. If you do, it'll confirm everything you already know about how good he is. к.р.к.

AUGUST

Killing Me Softly with His Song

We were skeptical when we heard about a musical version of "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." But apparently "THE HOLLOW" is not just about a creepy guy with a pumpkin for a head terrorizing the populace, it's about a small town blaming an outsider with outlandish ideas for their troubles! Broadway star Hunter Foster, above, wrote the book, with local composer Matt Conner on the score. But here's our lyrics: "They called him Pumpkin Head/That's how they got so dead/And then away he sped/While we were all abed!" F.z. - Signature Theatre, 4200 Campbell Ave., Arlington; opens in August; 703-820-9771, Signature-theatre.org.

Watch Your Back. Dude

"JULIUS CAESAR" is not only one of Shakespeare's finest plays, it's also the one most exquisitely suited to D.C. — the lessons about political gamesmanship and audience manipulation imparted here are still relevant for modern speechwriters and staffers. Take heed, everyone, and mind this free remounting of the Shakespeare Theatre's 2008 production. F.z.

It's Not Who You Think It Is

SHE'S NOT EVEN SCOTTISH: Patricia Racette stars as Iphigenie in "Iphigenie en Tauride," now playing at the Kennedy Center. Also featuring Placido Domingo, the opera tells the Greek story of Iphigenie, who was thought to have been killed by her dad but turns up as one of Diana's high priestesses. There are mistaken identities and gods and apparently some cool gloves.

Limited Engagements

All around the District, pop-up restaurants are, well, popping up. They are taking place inside custom-built domes, on sidewalks and in private homes. These transient affairs might be serving food for one day or for a limited run of dates. And when they're done, they're gone for good. Westend Bistro's chef de cuisine Joe Palma thinks these here-today-gone-tomorrow eateries are injecting a new excitement into D.C.'s dining scene. "Eating out in restaurants has almost become passé because so many people do it so often," he says. "Pop-ups let people try a completely new experience with a unique setting and tone." NEVIN MARTELL

WESTEND BISTRO

Since mid-April Eric Ripert's high-end eatery has been offering diners a more casual option with a weekly barbecue on its sidewalk. "Each restaurant has a personality, which is a blessing and curse when it comes to what you can and cannot do," explains Palma. "This lets us shake things up a bit." The cash-only, grab-and-go operation serves three sandwiches — a pulled pork with a mustard sauce, a pulled chicken with a vinegary sauce and a Texan beef brisket brined in Coke and rubbed in black garlic ($6 each) — as well as sides such as coleslaw ($2) and biscuits ($1). For Palma, the experience is an excuse to enjoy himself. "I'm hanging out and cooking in the sunshine," he says. "That's a nice place to be in life."

POPPING UP: Fridays (through the summer), 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m; 1190 22 St. NW; 202-974-4900; Westendbistrodc.com.

amateur chef with a self-described "adventurous palate." On St. Patrick's Day, she unveiled her below-the-radar supper club with a traditional Irish meal — corned beef and cabbage, soda bread and an Irish Car Bomb sundae (homemade Guinness chocolate ice cream drizzled with Baileys Irish Cream liqueur) — at her generation kitchen designer and an

Arlington home. "I want to create social food memories," says Neifeld. "Our motto is, "We're young, we're hungry and we're social." To add a level of collaboration between the kitchen and the dining room, potential patrons suggest menus and themes in advance via Nosh's Facebook page and through Twitter.

POPPING UP: May 28; $35 per person (suggested donation). Follow on Twitter for details: Twitter.com/noshsupperclub or make reservations at Noshsupperclub@gmail.com.

Think of Hush as a gastro speakeasy. HUSH Up to 22 guests meet at an undisclosed townhouse in the U Street corridor (the location is revealed when your reservation is confirmed) for a vegetarian dinner party hosted by a part-time Indian chef who goes by simply Geeta. The evening starts with a rotating cast of cocktails infused with ingredients from the subcontinent, such as Geeta's Kiss, which combines sparkling Prosecco with Rooh Afza (a sweetly floral Indian syrup). Guests' appetites are partially assuaged with an appetizer or two before Geeta gives a 45-minute talk on the food being served and her Gujarati Jain heritage that inspired it. "I'm best at being a cultural anthropologist and ambassador," she says. "I can guide you through my world in a way that is relevant to you." After the lecture and a Q&A session, the rest of the meal is served. The most recent dinner included dishes such as rice, dal (a thick, stew-like lentil dish), a vegetable, some raita (mild yogurt dip) and papadum (thin, crispy flatbreads). Dessert might be a cup of chai (spiced tea) and a dish of falooda, a classic Indian dessert made with rosewater (rose-flavored syrup), milk, ice cream and thin vermicelli noodles.

POPPING UP: May 20 and May 21; $75 per person (suggested donation). Follow on Twitter for details: Twitter. com/hushsupperclub, Hushsupperclub.com or make reservations at hushreservations@gmail.com.

Top: Arielle Mir and Yana Kravtsova at Hush's most recent dinner. Bottom: Chickpeas come topped with a healthy dose of fresh cilantro.

SENSORIUM

Taking place in a custom-built geodesic dome near Yards Park, Sensorium creates a high-end culinary circus by bringing together performance art and fine dining. "This is about showcasing the gastronomic arts and enhancing food through art," says ringleader and chef Bryon Brown, who honed his chops working at minibar and Jaleo. Diners enjoy a more-than-two-hour, 12-course dinner paired with wine, while a steampunk-styled improv routine featuring four local performers unfolds in front of them. Though the menu is constantly being tweaked to include new dishes, mainstay favorites include the Cloud 9 salad – salmon tartare presented on a plate made of ice – and the Nonsense course, which features a small cube of pork belly served on a miniature dollhouse chair and a potato and a wild onion laid out on a tiny table that's the perfect size for Gastronome Barbie.

POPPING UP: Tue.-Fri., 6 & 9 p.m. & Sat.-Sun., 6:30 p.m and 9:30 p.m. (through May 22), $150 per person. The dome can be found on the East Lawn of Yards Park at the corner of 4th and Tingey Streets. SE; 202-573-8197, Sensoriumdc.com.

It's Like a Gap Ad!

BOING! SPROING! Jane Franklin Dance is performing "Zip Through a Tight Space," a collection of the locally based dance troupe's recent works, this weekend at the Arlington Arts Center. To raise money for the group, there's a silent auction, a light supper and a wine tasting, in addition to watching crazy-fit people leap about and bend themselves in unnatural ways.

Wife Strife

'The Real Housewives of New Jersey' are back on TV Monday (minus pot-stirring cast member Danielle). Caroline's seemingly jobless sons move out. Jacqueline's airhead daughter Ashley has an internship with P.R. queen Lizzie "drove her car into a crowd of people" Grubman but complains because the commute sucks. Theresa's brother calls her "garbage" at his son's christening because he deems her a snob. All together now: BORING!

For a higher grade of housewife melodrama, try VH1's "Mob Wives," above.

Karen Gravano, child of Sammy "the Bull" Gravano, who ratted out other gangsters, leaves her job as den mother to strippers, and leaves HER DAUGHTER in Arizona, to return to Staten Island, N.Y. She aims to reconnect with old chums and write a book about her roots.

Gangster daughter Renee Graziano says to Karen, "You have a lot of balls coming back."

Drita D'avanza of Albania, wed to Karen's ex-boyfriend, is full of wrath: "The rats that put my husband in jail, I just want to break their @#$% legs."

And you gotta love Carla Facciolo. Her hubbie's in jail for stock fraud. She tells her two sons he's away at work.

Asked to strike a towering pose, he springs to his feet and in a blink is that's what people like."

Personalities

Thor and Spider-Man

continues to expand

his unrivaled legacy

Stan Lee professes no deep and analytical insight into the human soul.

"I'm not a psychiatrist," he says.

"All I know is, the good superhero movie has got action, suspense, colorful characters, new angles - balancing atop a chair.

Seventy years to the month after the nom-de-toon "Stan Lee" first appeared in a comic book, "Thor" is similarly perched atop the box office. In one sense, the origin story of Stanley Martin Lieber resembles that of the Norse superhero he cocreated, only told backward. Thor is to the godhead born until, because of his impudence, he's sentenced to a mortal existence. Lee was a mere Manhattan comics-industry mortal for decades until, because of diligence and vision, he was elevated to Marvel Comics demigod, creating - alongside fellow legends Jack Kirby and Steve Ditko — the likes of Spider-Man and Iron Man, the Hulk, X-Men and the Fantastic Four.

All those characters have already appeared in feature films, and the latest wave of Hollywood superheroes is gathering force as it rolls in this summer. "Thor's" domestic opening last Friday will be followed by "X-Men: First Class," DC's "Green Lantern" and Marvel's "Captain America: The First Avenger."

The superhero film is still as unstoppable and resilient and enduring as, well, Lee himself.

"My theory about why people like superheroes is that when we were kids, we all loved to read fairy tales," "My theory about why people like superheroes is that when we were kids, we all loved to read fairy tales."

Lee says. "Superhero movies are like fairy tales for older people."

Lee still creates superheroes ceaselessly, as if his trained writer's brain were an involuntary muscle. "The first Chinese superhero," he promises, teasing his upcoming lineup. "And the first musical comic book." He's also teaming with Arnold Schwarzenegger to create an animated TV character, "the Governator."

Lee's literary approach — and his desire to depict his heroes' private lives — profoundly altered comics. Spider-Man suffers a teen's social travails. Iron Man battles his demon addiction. Lee says he was guided by intimate questions: "What did they do when they weren't fighting supervillains? What were their hopes, dreams, aspirations, as well as their frustrations?"

He believes passionately that many people like their superheroes to have depth, to have vulnerability, to have flaws — to be vexed beneath the spandex.

"For a long time, there was no personal involvement with some of the superheroes," Lee says. "I'd read books and Dickens always had interesting characters. Mark Twain had interesting characters.

"I wanted to write the kind of dialogue that would give the character personality." MICHAEL CAVNA (THE WASHINGTON POST)

myTunes: Google unveiled its long-planned music service Tuesday, but it will likely need deals with the recording industry to reach its full potential. Called "Music Beta by Google," the service lets users store up to 20,000 tunes remotely and access them from any compatible device, including mobile phones, tablets and computers. So far, it does not offer music downloads and is available by invitation only, free of charge while it is being tested. (AP)

The Sounds of Science Fiction

Gang Gang Dance's otherworldly songs thrill on 'Eye Contact'

Album Review

Gang Gang Dance is the band that science fiction promised us. Omnivorous ears that seek out the group's fearless new album "Eye Contact" will swear that it came from the future. Or prehistory. Or some great, galactic beyond.

Or New York. That's where the band formed in the early aughties, rubbing elbows with kindred avantrock troupes Animal Collective and TV on the Radio. But as those bands entered the mainstream, Gang Gang Dance's brainy swirl of dub, Bollywood and reggaeton remained largely subterranean.

That probably won't change here.

Easily the band's most accessible album, it's still a demanding listen that pushes toward some uncharted tropical space age.

You can sense the band's spirit immediately with "Glass Jar," an album-opening track that sounds as natural and mystifying as birth. Drummer Jesse Lee settles into a free-jazz simmer while keyboardist Brian DeGraw lets his synthesizers gleam and sparkle. After six minutes of anticipation, the beat spills over into a blissed-out, aural avalanche. Singer Lizzi Bougatsos dives in: "I surrender!"

And to the sounds, so do we. Chris richards (the Washington Post)

OPEN HOUSE - TOWN HALL MEETING - PUBLIC HEARING

We are tuning in to you to help us make important decisions about Metro's future.

For the first time ever, Metro will host combined Open Houses and Town Hall Meetings prior to its official Public Hearings. Metro staff members will be available at Open Houses for one-on-one conversations about Metro service and programs. Town Hall Meetings will give you an opportunity to talk about the future of the system with Metro leaders, including members of the Metro Board of Directors. During the Public Hearings, Metro will take formal testimony on the following options under consideration for the FY12 budget:

- Increasing the Metrorail train wait times on weekends
- Eliminating the Metrobus E6, K1 and N8 lines
- Restructuring the Metrobus M4, V7, V8, 70 and 71 lines

 Eliminating the 50¢ discount on certain Anacostia bus routes, resulting in MetroAccess fare increase, and modification of the Anacostia station bus transfer discount program

The Open Houses will be from 5:30-6:00 p.m. followed by the Town Hall Meetings/Q&A from 6:00-6:45 p.m. The Public Hearings will start at 6:45 p.m. Please join us at one of the following:

A Jukebox of History

Music

As crackly recordings of foxtrot tunes poured from speakers at the Library of Congress on Tuesday, Harry Connick sat motionless except for a single index finger that pounded out a swinging beat. He was rapt.

"This is all completely new to me," he said. "I'm going to go home and play this stuff for my Connick wife and kids."

Connick was on hand Tuesday as the Library of Congress and Sony announced the launch of a website (Loc.gov/jukebox) that allows listeners to stream a vast archive of more than 10,000 pre-1925 recordings of music, speeches, poetry and comedy. Much of it hasn't been widely available since World War I. Call it America's iTunes.

Officials billed it as the largest collection of such historical recordings ever made available online. The library hopes to add tens of thousands more songs to the National Jukebox in the coming years.

"These recordings are the foundation of the American sound," said James Billington, the librarian of Congress. "They helped transform the musical landscape of the 20th century." JUSTIN JOUVENAL (THE WASH-INGTON POST)

Horoscope

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may find yourself playing a guessing game of sorts throughout the day. Be ready for a surprise, when all is said and done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The same old thing isn't likely to satisfy you in ways that it has in the past. Today, you'll want to make certain impromptu changes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) As soon as you determine that something is easy, it's likely to become far more complicated. Don't underestimate anything.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be reminded of why certain things have worked for you in the past, and others have not. Make the right choice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take care that you don't inadvertently sabotage your own efforts. Focus on the outcome, and choose the most direct route.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're going to have to be a little more daring than usual in order to score any kind of memorable victory.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) On your way to a prime destination, you may want to take a brief side trip in order to indulge a personal whim.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) How directly you express yourself will have an immediate effect on almost all interpersonal dynamics. Be straightforward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Are you willing to put any embarrassment aside and try something new - no matter how you may look doing it? Be daring and unconventional.

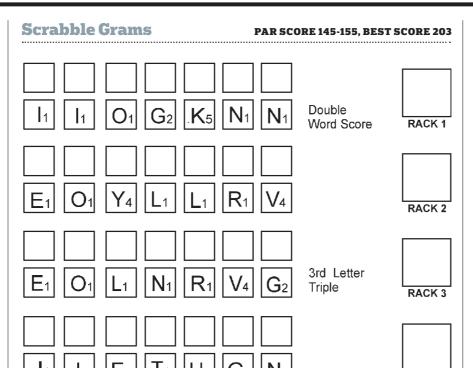

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may have to let a good friend go undercover for a time in order to finish a project that is so important to your own efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may find yourself stuck between two strong influences. The way to free yourself is to get in touch with your deepest desires.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) All you need is one good idea in order to break free of the kind of rut that you are convinced you've been in for quite some time.

EXCUSES

It's Still Surgery

Bristol Palin admits her recent change in appearance was due to a procedure but not plastic surgery. Palin underwent corrective jaw surgery in December so her jaw and teeth could properly realign. Her face now appears thinner, with higher cheekbones and an angular jaw. "Yes, it improved the way I look, but this surgery was necessary for medical reasons," she said. (AP)

Victims

'Acting Doesn't Count?'

Lindsay Lohan pleaded no contest Wednesday to stealing a $2,500 necklace, in a deal expected to let her to serve a jail term at home. Lohan also said she's begun fulfilling her community service requirements. (AP)

THAT'S WHAT SHE SAID

'Brilliant! This Thing Was Starting to Get Rather Heavy'

The hat Princess Beatrice wore to the Royal Wedding can now be yours - for the right price, according to People.com. "She's putting it up on eBay to auction it for UNICEF and for Children in Crisis," Beatrice's mother, Sarah Ferguson, said on "The Oprah Winfrey Show." (EXPRESS)

"We dated, very casually. He's a very sweet, nice guy ... I was sampling, kind of, the atmosphere, seeing what was out there, and I was satiated."
